ABOUT THE INDIVIDUAL RESERVE

The Individual Reserve (IR) is comprised of Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMA) and Participating Individual Ready Reservists (PIRR). The active-component organizations and government agencies to which these Reserve Citizen Airmen are assigned maintain operational control of these Airmen, while HQ RIO and the IR owning organization share administrative control.

The IR program offers many benefits to reservists, including increased flexibility, the ability to serve alongside active-component service members, career-broadening opportunities such as joint duty assignment list, National-Capitol Region and higher headquarters assignments, and access to many benefits available to traditional reservists like MWR, TRICARE and Space A travel. IRs are also able to volunteer for MPA and RPA opportunities.

IMA | Category B reservist assigned to augment an active-component organization or government agency; participate for pay and points; must complete 12 days of annual tour and either 24 or 48 inactive duty training periods each year.

PIRR | Category E reservist assigned to augment an active-component organization; participate for points towards retirement only, though they are eligible for paid MPA and RPA opportunities; must complete 50 points-only inactive duty training periods each year.

INDIVIDUAL RESERVE SUPPORTS THESE ORGANIZATIONS

Individual Reservists support more than 50 major commands, combatant commands and government agencies
